women we value, are all gentle, unwerldly, pure and modest. A woman at | tie. We must be prepared to fight it. the head of an army or wielding a bloody sabre in battle would be bereft in our mind of all the sentiment which has grown to be considered as her prewhen our dear old mothers took no interest in other business than that so unattainable as it does now. When party but by the whole country. The blush of innocence brushed from their great advance surely. Anything in cheeks, women were simply angels this matter of tariff reform is better Father to bear a race of heroes. All who came within their sphere felt at once the gentle, though subtle influ ence and men were purer and better by reason of their association with them. In those good old days a divorce court would have been without business and a divorce lawyer would have starved to death. Ah! who does not sigh for the return of those days when brave and honest men, fair and gentle women ruled, the one in politics the other in home and religion. There was no moral miaema to destroy moral health. Men and women were better because they were less selfish, were gentler and more within reach of the gentler reason, which centrol.

In the northern states the grand women who were the mothers and wives of our Hancocks, Livingstones, Clintons, Hamiltons, were exalted ladies. Their homes were havens of rest where every virtue sprang from congenial soil and produced fruit such as won revolutionary victories and built up declarations of independence and gave to fame names which can never die. In the southern states the venerable whitehaired women who made of their homes, heavens on earth, who wore their dear lives away in arduous labors for both their white and black families, with never a suggestion of families and families. doing more than their duty. LIGHT OR HEAVY WHEELS.

Cyclists This Summer Have Decided That What They Want Is Good Read The light wheel problem, which this year more than ever is absorbing the to have a political inninz, it seems Mr. attention of cyclists, is a pretty difficult one to solve satisfactorily. Everybody wants to ride a light wheel, but everybody does not want to ride one that will not stand the pounding of a rutty road or an occasional tumble. Wood rims are being extensively ridden, but they are not as strong as metal rims and never can be. A great many wheels that weigh from 18 to 24 pounds are being ridden vote if he gets the nomination. We over all kinds of roads this season in Brooklyn and out on Long Island, and a large percentage of them are coming The rider of one has to be as careful of his mount as if it were a delicate race horse. Universal use of featherweight wheels will scarcely come until the roads are far better than they average today. England has had the light wheel craze and has got pretty well over it. American wheelmen like the light machine and don't want to give it up. Hence they are crying for good roads and accomplishing much in that direction. It is maintained by many good riders that over an ordinary road a 30 pound wheel is easier and faster than a 20 pounder because it is steadier and does not lose way in bounding over a
